Background

'Saving Lives' – a project of Rotary Club of Birmingham and their partners have launched the first Indian Faculty for Disaster Medicine in March 2015 from Pune, India. This is the first teaching and learning Faculty for Disaster Medicine in South Asia. Currently, there are three University based teaching programmes in the world – one in North America (MS in Disaster Medicine and Management program, delivered as a partnership between Philadelphia University and the Department of Emergency Medicine of the Albert Einstein Health Network), second one is in Europe (European Master in Disaster Medicine) and third course is based at London/ Liverpool, UK (The London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine run diploma courses in tropical medicine, disaster, and humanitarian aid) A fourth teaching programme is being delivered by Society of Apothecaries of London (Course in Conflict & Catastrophe Medicine).

South Asian countries and other developing countries do not have the financial muscle and human resources of developed world to manage disasters. The health care in these developed countries is well established and resourced to provide both emergency care and post disaster health care. It is well recognised that while many developing countries have significant medical and health care expertise, there is clear absence of trained people in Disaster Medicine.

Just over 20 years ago Rotary Club of Birmingham established a partnership with Rotary Club of Pune Central and Rotary Club of Latur to support rehabilitation programme in Kilhari region of the Maharashtra earthquake. Following on from this partnership, Rotary Club of Birmingham has worked with several partners in India, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka in helping and supporting post disaster rehabilitation with focus on health care and public health. Based on the experience from this work, Millennium President of Birmingham Rotary Club, Dr Peter Patel, the project founder for these programmes formulated the concept of 'Saving Lives' – a programme focusing on education and training of the medical and healthcare professionals for Disaster Management and Disaster Medicine. Appendix 1 attached to this document provides additional information on the Faculty of Disaster Medicine – India and Nepal.

There is significant body of evidence that disasters have greatest impact on developing countries including India. These include avoidable deaths or serious injuries, infections, poor health and rehabilitation, loss of homes, livelihoods, businesses, jobs amongst many other socio-economic indicators. Disasters also have impact on poverty reduction and this leads to further impact on the healthcare system of the country.

'SAVING LIVES' project and Birmingham Rotary with their current partner hospitals (see Appendix 1) proposes to establish partnership with a small number of key hospitals and/or medical colleges in India to introduce 'training of trainers' and a core training curriculum for 'DISASTER MEDICINE' in their regions.

At the launch of North Indian Faculty from Delhi in September 2017, following comments were made by key Faculty leads:

Dr Peter Patel, founder and international director of the programme said:
"This initiative establishes India in the forefront of countries in the world that address disasters head on."

Professor Muzaffar Ahmed, ex-executive member of NDMA and ex- chairman, ethics committee, MCI, reiterates "Such programs are the need of the hour for India. We will make sure such programs are conducted in a systemic manner on a regular basis, covering all the aspects of Disaster Management".

Dr James O'Biren, Regional Director of Public Health NHS South West, is a founder member of this Faculty and has worked towards training officials for disaster preparedness for the Jagannath Yatra, Puri. He says "This is very important for the improvement of public health in India".

Dr James P Kingsland OBE opines "The extent of care needed for the preparation, support and aftermath of disasters requires a multidisciplinary approach which includes a primary (community) based service for the recovery, reablement and return to health of affected communities. This Faculty is rising up to the challenge". Dr Kingsland is the President of the National Association of Primary Care, UK.
